I would like to volunteer. Please call me for the next orientation session.

MARS works closely with local veterinarians and the SPCA.

MARS responds to hundreds of calls a year through our toll free pager. Briefly leave a message or your name and phone number. One of our volunteers will assist you with a wildlife rescue or will answer your questions about wildlife rehabilitation. If you have found an injured bird:

- keep it warm, dark and quiet
- put it in a cardboard box
- do not feed
- call us

The Centre

Since 1995 MARS has operated a designated Wildlife Rehabilitation Centre situated on three acres at 6817 Headquarters Road in Merville, BC.

Our Rehabilitator has federal and provincial permits since 1993 to provide professional care for wildlife. We are not a zoo, our patients need peace and quiet in order to recover from their injuries.

We specialize in small birds, waterfowl and raptors. We help rescue eagles and mammals and transport to other rehabilitation centres on the West Coast. We encourage the public to help with the rescue of wildlife by bringing small species to a veterinarian or us if injured. With large or dangerous wildlife such as eagles or swans our trained staff, and volunteers will respond. Please contact us first before you interfere.

A proud member of:
Wildlife Rehabilitators Network of BC.

Mountaineer Avian Rescue Society

(MARS) is a non-profit, volunteer-run charitable organization dedicated to helping ill, injured, orphaned or oiled wildlife, mainly birds, recover and eventually release those which have a chance for survival, back into the wild.

The Society is registered in British Columbia (S33281) and is overseen by a volunteer Board of Directors.

We handled over 500 cases and more than 3000 phone calls in 2005 from Northern Vancouver Island.

A certified Wildlife Rehabilitator directs MARS's rehabilitation work, while volunteers carry out many activities. Group tours of the facility are available by appointment only.

Educational slide presentations are available to schools and other groups.

These activities are funded primarily through donations, memberships and fundraising activities, with some corporate grants.

We sincerely appreciate the generous support of all our members and donors.

Please give us your support.
